Of the three insurance providers, I would choose GEICO. While Progressive had the highest average rating, GEICO's two very high ratings are offest by one outlier, while Progressive's three ratings are overall more average. It's likely that GEICO offers better overall service, and that the single outlier was more attributable to luck than to their quality of service. GEICO's second-highest score is almost as high as Progressive's highest score. Progressive may have more consistent service, but if it's consistently average, is that really better than a service that normally scores very high, but has the occasional miss? As well, disgruntled customers are more likely to rate service as worse than it actually was. For these reasons, I would choose GEICO over Progressive and USAA.